

14th International BUILDAIR Symposium

Airtight Buildings, Thermography and Ventilation Systems in Practice

April 29, 2025

Dear partners for airtight construction,
dear friends all over the world,

In just over two weeks, the 14th International BUILDAIR Symposium will begin in Hanover. We have summarised for you in just a few lines why you should not miss the conference:

- 1. Concentrated information: The lecture programme once again offers a wide range of practical experience as well as new findings and development results. Know-how that you can use in your everyday work from 18 May.
- 2. Similarities and differences: What aspects are important to our neighbours? Engage in dialogue with experts from all over the world – there will be plenty of inspiration in the session with our partner AIVC, in the specialist presentations and in personal discussions.
- 3. Exhibition accompanying the conference: During the lecture breaks, you will have plenty of time to ask the company representatives lots of questions - without additional effort. On the conference website you can find out which companies you can meet at the exhibition.

4. Get to know colleagues or meet them again: 'Together with other people we achieve more than alone', as the Dalai Lama once said. The symposium and the barbecue buffet on Friday evening provide the perfect setting for getting to know each other and talking to each other.

5. Be brought up to date at a favourable price: The participation fee for the two-day, simultaneously translated symposium is also at a very favourable level – you can rarely get more cost-effective independent training!

Treat yourself to this short break from everyday life and take plenty of information and inspiration home with you - you can still register until 9 May!

We look forward to seeing you in Hanover in May!

Kind regards
Sabine Schneider
